You've heard of cyberspace. It's a global community of people connected by the Internet. If you go into cyberspace, then you are a cyber citizen. Every cyber citizen has the keys to cyberspace.

Using the Power of the Internet

With the keys to cyberspace, you can unlock its power. You can search out and explore new places. You can find all kinds of interesting information. You can argue. You can tell jokes. And you can share your opinions with people all over the world.

Are you ready to take the keys?

Unlocking the power of the Internet is an awesome responsibility. In exchange for the keys to cyberspace, cyber citizens have responsibilities. They should keep safe and use good manners. They should respect laws and the rules of their school's Acceptable Use Policy, and any rules their parents may make. By being good cyber citizens everyone helps take care of the Internet.

Share Your Opinions in Cyberspace

There are many ways to use the power of cyberspace. One way is to share your opinions in a poll. Polls ask questions that have a choice of answers. You vote for the answer with which you agree.

You can find polls on the Web. Some ask questions about serious problems. Some ask about products. Others are just for fun. Web polls help you feel like part of a community. You can express yourself and find out how others feel. You can see the voting results right away and learn what people think.
